Summary:

Originally developed in 2012 as an SOT Annual Meeting event to compliment their international activities, today IUTOX hosts Global Collaboration events at the SOT Annual Meeting and at our international congresses. The Merida Global Collaboration event is intended to highlight just a few of the international organizations IUTOX partners with to provide programming and to meet mutual organizational goals. Also featured are IUTOX member societies that provide travel awards, innovative programming, and information about funding opportunities for their members and others who live and work in countries where toxicology is under-represented.

Our distinguished speakers have promoted science and toxicology through their professional achievements and through the work of the organizations they represent. A common message IUTOX leadership heard at the recent Global Collaboration events in New Orleans and Natal was the mandate for IUTOX to provide the means for member societies and countless other entities to share information and resources across countries and regions; discuss how and if these programs and resources can be more effective and widely available; and finally, what opportunities exist to encourage and facilitate future communication among the international scientific community. The next Global Collaboration event will be held in Baltimore, Maryland at the SOT Annual Meeting, March 12 – 16, 2017.
